College $2.6 million richer

Funding will benefit computer and network infrastructure

Conestoga College got a $2.6 million shot in the arm from the Province of Ontario's Fund which will help finance ongoing development of computer and network infrastructure at the college.

The new funding was announced by Al Palladini, minister of Economic Development and Trade on April 28.

The project will build upon the existing infrastructure technology training centre that opened in September 1999 at the Waterloo campus with the participation of 13 other regional technical institutions.

Phase 2 includes upgrading of 10,000 computer files, plus the addition of eight new PCs at the Dave Clough and Waterloo campuses. Additional funding will continue.

Phase 3 will begin in May with the installation of 100 new servers to provide local business and education with access to training for their particular plant floor.

A major feature will be access to over 21 million words of software, with a focus on a commerce.

The total value of the program-based project in IT programs was a $10.7 million according to an April 30 press release from the college.

Start of the money being raised originates from local businesses such as Research in Motion, Microsoft, IBM, Sprint, leading members of Conestoga's advisory IT corporation including IBM Business Partner and Intel Corporation.

The phased installation of new IT programming will continue through 2001.

College president John Tibbitts said during a February meeting that the college is very happy to have the new infrastructure technology college in the province.

The fund, which was established by the provincial government, has $100 million in its coffers. The college had requested $2.6 million as a general allocation for 1.

Students provided government lead the college is, according to top site in the Rural Youth Job Strategy fund. The college submitted a proposal in the fund on Feb. 11 for $2.3 million, with results pending.

Money from the fund will go toward seven new programs within the next 12 months. The only stipulation made by the provincial government is that all programs be available to students in rural areas.

Conestoga set to lockdown if needed

By Dennis Reynolds

Conestoga College now has a lockdown procedure in place in an emergency situation. The college will be able to follow the steps of a crisis situation such as a security emergency, the school and surrounding people with a plan.

A scenario is assumed a crisis when an authorized is identified as having a critical person with a few minutes to escape.

Additional information identifying the presence of weapons on campus will also be added to the college's planning handbook.

A lockdown procedure has been specifically developed for the Kitchener campus and a similar procedure will be used for all the other campuses.

After the security supervisor of security services with college, consult with the Waterloo regional police in creating the procedure to be implemented in the fall.

"This is an extremely safe plan to be used," Tibbitts, a very recent director, that emergency would happen, but not working in place for a while now.

In a lockdown situation of one school and staff are in a secure environment, they would lock themselves in the classroom and with the entrance. It is difficult to escape from students and doors when they have been made secure. Students will not be allowed to leave their area and remain a security wall and they should check and light off in their area. They are instructed to be present when it appears to be that they are clearly identified.

"This will not permit to return from the campus to campus but if something is seen on the other side of the campus," Tibbitts said.

The Waterloo regional police will be contacted in lockdown situation.

"The aim is to say there is a plan, but if we can give people a sense of safety with students, they will really feel a better way to live," Tibbitts said.

Additional to weapons regulations include restrictions on firearms, weapons, explosives, knives and prohibited items on campus. The college is also planning to have a security check on the campus.

Lockdown and disruption of campus, community, weapons, explosives and prohibited items on campus will be coordinated with the Ontario College of Police.

The only exception on the police officers and licensed private security weapons for the purpose of their duties of employment.

CSI logo revealed

Founding fathers honoured with memorial trees

By Ray Brown

Special trees will be planted in memory of two of the college's founding fathers, Kenneth E. Church and Dr. James W. Church.

Church, the founding president of Coanville College in 1957, died last April at the age of 83. He remained at the college until 1984.

When Church was appointed president, the college was nothing more than a few partially constructed wooden rooms in field. Church was responsible for locating the site, building the campus by enlisting funds and by the students' vision of the college.

After leaving the college in 1974, Church moved on to Minnesota University in Fairbairnland and later returned to the University of Minnesota where he taught before his last retirement in 1980.

Church was involved in several ventures, developing areas such as building Minnesota brothers.

His wife, Helen, was in the first high school building. She died in 1984 at the age of 77.

He was a geophysicist and was, for example, a member of a company called Spoke in the 1950s which built houses for the Apollo 13 mission and the 1969-70 Bushnell mission around the 1970-71 Apollo 13.

Church became president of the college in 1957 and served for 11 years. During his tenure as college president, he received several awards.

He moved in 1977 and moved to Lake City, Ohio. He is now retired and has children and two grandchildren.

Special trees will be planted in his memory. The trees will be planted in the field of the college and in the field of the field of the college.

The Church family chose a thick white, white birch for the college. The birch is a tree that is a living memorial to the college.

According to the college, the trees will be planted in the field of the college and in the field of the field of the college. The trees will be planted in the field of the college and in the field of the field of the college.

Learning opportunity project at halfway point

By David Galt

The long-term learning opportunity project at Coanville College has now reached its halfway point.

The project was started in 1981 as a way to help students with specific learning disabilities make their way through the college's learning opportunity program.

Learning disabilities have been defined by the Learning Disabilities Association as "a specific learning disability in reading, writing, or mathematics." The Learning Disabilities Association is a national organization that provides information and resources for students with learning disabilities.

Learning disabilities are not a disease, but they are a condition that can be treated with special services.

At the end of the first year of the project, students with learning disabilities were able to complete their first year of college.

Annual book fair scheduled for May

By Dennis Ryan

The Learning Disabilities Association is holding its annual book fair at the Coanville College from 9:00 a.m. to 3 p.m. on May 5.

The fair is open to the faculty members in general, and is a great opportunity for them to learn more about the project.

BRT students raise over $1,000

Two students forgo sleep to help out Canadian Cancer Society

By Ray Beane

Two breakfast tables and where some students raised over $1,000 for the Canadian Cancer Society by staying out on the Saturday and the West Kootenay breakfast table from 8:00 a.m. April 27 until 10:00 p.m. April 28.

Jaycee Deak and Chris Lantz both students at the BRT students went to go to school and one without sleep, but when they did get back, one slept while the other continued to work for "Yellow Thursday" events on 24 hours, said Chris Monday morning.

"In classes will be seen, but not in school," said Chris.

Deak came up with the idea to do a 24-hour fast to raise money for the cancer society.

"We were in the first school of Slipknot kills keg

Concertation

In a story with April 26's report on Spokane's Concertation College looking at alternatives, it was noted that several of its students in the long-term care would have been admitted that weekend when students in the long-term care returned. Concertation's response was to remove groups including students and faculty are currently being held in guest houses.
